I just refinanced my 2nd rental property last week. I ended up buying the sfr with cash to help make the deal but what I found out was that regardless of the appraisal (which was 32% over what I paid for it) the bank would only lend my 75% of the purchase price since there was no mortgage on the property.

No one talks about how darn slow investing in rental properties will build your wealth.

People only talk about how awesome rental properties are, mainly because they have something to sell you.

And that something requires you to buy rental properties.

Turnkey companies are one of the worst abusers of selling you
