N.G. Wilson gives "an account of what happened to Greek literature from the end of the ancient world until the time of its reappearance in western Europe during the Renaissance." Since the Byzantine Empire is usually regarded for preserving this cultural inheritance, he sets out to "explain why the Byzantines thought it worthwhile to act as they did and how they set about their task ...

Architecture. Cross-in-square: The cross-in-square was the dominant architectural form of middle Byzantine churches. Marking a decided departure from the oblong ground plan of the basilica, it has been described as "a type of church that was, in its own way, perfect". The earliest extant example being the Theotokos church in Constantinople (907/908), its development can be traced back with a ...
